Lecture on report writing — Report

Dharwad: With the media playing an important role in dissemination of information it has become pertinent for everyone to learn the art of report writing, said senior journalist Gururaj Jamkhandi.

Delivering a special lecture on 'Report Writing' at a session organised by the department of English, K E Board's First Grade College in Dharwad on ..19..2.2..21...., he said report writing is not the domain of only the professional journalists. "Everyone in an organization should be able to write good reports about their performance. It may be reporting for news media or to the superiors in the organizations. Effective writing should reflect the performance of the organization. All good work will go unnoticed if it is not informed to others through a powerful, good report" he said.

Explaining that the business establishments and educational institutions were hiring content writers to highlight their products, Mr Jamkhandi said that ability to write good report will fetch good employment also.

He explained that space is a constraint in print media while time is a constraint in radio. A good report should make the reader feel that he is visualizing the event, he said. He pointed out that simple, correct language in the report will be successful in conveying the information in its right perspective.

Mr Jamkhandi demonstrated by writing a report during the session and answered the queries from the students.

Professors Vidya Kulkarni, Roopa Chandragiri and others were present.

Writing is a powerful means of transferring knowledge: Journalist

Dharwad: Writing is a process, a logical sequence of step and the writing should be the product of a logical process. The successful writer gathers, focuses, orders, drafts and revises. Pre-writing, writing and re writing are the main components said senior journalist Gururaj Jamkhandi.

Delivering a special lecture on 'Writing for the media' organised by the department of English, K E Board's First Grade College in Dharwad on 23-08-19 he said The first step in the process is gathering. Good writing begins with good reporting. The writer must find the details that reveal meaning and he should have to have facts.

"Once you have the facts, decide on a focus or theme. After deciding on the theme the facts should be placed in a logical order. Like a blueprint, each story needs a plan. Each point should grow from the previous point and lead to the next one" he explained.

Stating that media has been playing a very important role in transfer of knowledge, he narrated how the devises like mobile phones and internet were extensively used in imparting knowledge while conducting online classes during pandemic and lockdown.

Apart from explaining important aspects of good writing Gururaj Jamkhandi also shared his experience as a journalist and the pressure a reporter has while delivering an important report in a presentable manner at a very short time.

The resource person also answered queries from the students during the discussion that followed. Professor Vidya Kulkarni, Roopa Chandragiri and others were present.

Writing is a Powerful Media

Delivering a special lecture on 'Writing for the media' organised by the department of English, K E Board's First Grade College in Dharwad on 27-09-2018 he said the first step in the process is gathering. Good writing begins with good reporting. The writer must find the details that reveal meaning and he should have to have facts.

Writing is a process, a logical sequence of step and the writing should be the product of a logical process. The successful writer gathers, focuses, orders, drafts and revises. Pre-writing, writing and re writing are the main components said senior journalist Gururaj Jamkhandi.

"Once you have the facts, decide on a focus or theme. After deciding on the theme the facts should be placed in a logical order. Like a blueprint, each story needs a plan. Each point should grow from the previous point and lead to the next one" he explained.

Apart from explaining important aspects of good writing Gururaj Jamkhandi also shared his experience as a journalist and the pressure a reporter has while delivering an important report in a presentable manner at a very short time.

Stating that media has been playing a very important role in transfer of knowledge, he narrated how the devises like mobile phones and internet were extensively used in imparting knowledge while conducting online classes during pandemic and lockdown.

The resource person also answered queries from the students during the discussion that followed. Professor Vidya Kulkarni, Roopa Chandragiri and others were present.
